Food Handler Card and Food Safety Certification Trainers and Providers

Food Handler Card

Beginning June 1, 2011, all employees, with some exemptions, that are involved in the preparation, storage or service of food must obtain a food handler card. Some examples of a food handler include wait staff, chefs, head cooks, bussers, bartenders, host/hostesses that handle food, beverage pourers. If a person has a valid Food Protection Manager Certification, then he/she does not need to obtain a California Food Handler Card. Frequently asked questions and answers, including information on exempt employee criteria, can be found at California Food Handler Law Guidelines. There are several providers that may offer the course. However, you must pass an approved exam to be certified. The exams listed below are recognized in California:

Food Protection Manager Certification

Any food facility that prepares or serves non-packaged, potentially hazardous food must have a certified food safety person. Some examples of food facilities that require a certified food safety person include restaurants, some grocery stores and mini markets, delis, hot food trucks, refreshment stands and commissaries. There are several providers that may offer the course. However, you must pass an approved exam to be certified. The exams listed below are recognized in California:
